St Luke's Hospice Basildon, has devised an innovative and unique pathway alongside the acute liver services of Basildon Hospital. This allows patients and their carers with ALD, to have timely access to a range of hospice services and interventions whilst still receiving input and interventions from the acute liver services. Allowing a parallel planning approach to advanced liver disease.

This project has run a successful pilot and attracted significant national interest both in palliative care and hepatology forums. This has resulted in a significant award from The Health Foundation to St Luke's Hospice to develop the work.

This collaborative and multi-disciplinary working between St Luke's Hospice and Basildon liver team seems so far unparalleled on a national level, despite calls to meet this challenging and complex area of need.

The current study is now at its mid-point and early data show that patients and their carers with ALD have complex and unmet needs. Early emergent themes and data are showing the potential for the model to improve quality of life and compliance; to enable more patients to be considered for transplantation and improved and more cost effective paracentesis services when managed by St Luke's Hospice.

The project is due for completion in February 2017 and highlights an innovative approach by St Luke's for patients and their carers with non-malignant disease.

P-147 SPIRITUAL ASSESSMENT – 'HARASSMENT BY QUESTIONING'?

Spirituality is an integral component of holistic care; the initial assessment of a patient's spiritual needs often poses a challenge. I recognised that nursing staff frequently expressed feelings of inadequacy when exploring this area.

It was expected that chaplains would record such assessments; yet it became clear to me that in engaging with patients both in the initial admission process and ongoing conversations this area of a patient's care was in fact being addressed. What was lacking was their recording of this information.

After reviewing literature, exploring the experience of other hospices, and reflecting on our experience, we have developed a holistic assessment recorded as narrative on SystemOne.

The initial recording of the assessment is completed by the admitting nurse as he/she reflects upon their conversation with the patient and/or their carers.

Literature and experience indicate that "relationships" are at the heart of a person's spirituality which therefore forms an integral part of the assessment. On the SystemOne template are found text boxes in which information relating to a patient's relationships with "self", "others", "the world" and "belief system" can be recorded. Guidance on its completion can be found on the template.

Initially there was some resistance to the concept, nurses citing lack of expertise and time constraints as contributing to their unease. To a large degree this has been overcome by provision of internal training and one-to-one support as necessary. Compliance of completion will be checked as part of a records keeping audit this year.

I found that nursing staff are becoming more confident in the completion of the assessment which informs the wider multidisciplinary team and enhances the holistic care offered to patients and their carers.

Take home message; "Spiritual Assessment is not about ticking boxes but rather about listening, reflecting and recording!"

P-148 SPIRITUAL CARE, HUMAN AND DIVINE, AT END OF LIFE – MODELS FIT FOR THE FUTURE

Nelson Mandela is quoted as saying: 'If you talk to a man in a language he understands that goes to his head. If you talk to a man in his language, that goes to his heart'.

Seeking to speak into the heart of all our patients and carers our hospice has moved over the last two years from chaplaincy to spiritual care – not just in name but in philosophy of care. We have been developing a model which overtly honours the spirit human and divine, and cares for each individual as a spiritual person. Patient records and stories demonstrate the relevance of this philosophy of care.

Moreover our vision is that, as spiritual beings, all staff and volunteers – clinical and non-clinical – are spiritual carers and we are rolling out a programme of formal and informal training.

Mindful that the future of hospice care lies in the community and that research states "there is an urgent need to develop policy and practice in community settings to support people dying at home". ('Spiritual Care at the End of Life: a systematic review of the literature', DH 2011, p38.)

...we have initiated three community pilot projects, initially working with church groups, skilling lay people in spiritual care at end-of-life:

structure – flexible eg a single session or series of sessions; working with/supporting individual carers over a period of time; training the trainer, 'pump priming';

timescale – negotiated with each project;

content – exploration and practice of concepts and skills, including caring for 'non-faith' people;

evaluation to include feedback from those 'cared for', carers and healthcare professionals;

next steps

- pilots working through secular agencies
- exploring new models, eg 'telecare'/social media
- 'training trainers'.

Patients, families, staff and volunteers will be asked to give their views as part of a qualitative study with an ethnographic approach to ascertain the values and beliefs in relation to the definition of spiritual care and what it means for the patient experience. The study will be evaluated against the following outcomes:
